THE artist who uses Devoe Colors takes advantage of the hardest, most searching test any product can undergo—that of Father Time.

Since pre-Revolutionary days,

Devoe has been making quality paints. 166 years of experience and the traditions of quality so long a career have engendered go into the making of Devoe Artists' Oil Colors.

F O R E W O R D

RECENT EVENTS seem to have stimulated the emotional life of the American people to such a degree that they find it hard to fall back into the complacency of their former living. The old security in ease and comfort seems suddenly insufficient, and there is a general searching for more enduring values, and a scrutiny of the nation's resources, spiritual as well as material. We have been in the habit of looking overseas for artistic guidance, and now, taking stock of ourselves, we wonder whether that is any longer necessary. For here, unsuspected among us, our artists have been at work setting down a record of our deeper virtues.

The inauguration of the Junior Art Patrons of America comes quite opportunely with this awakened recognition of the artist as the one among us, who can best give expression to those ardors and aspirations which have animated our national life from its beginnings. And this First Retrospective Exhibition of American Art is in the way of a mirror making reflection of our truest and most abiding qualities. Here are the visions of our native painters and sculptors translated, and made tangible and visible to us; all together they form a picture of us by which we will be judged by future generations.

It is impossible to view this exhibition without just pride. I believe that many people who visit these halls will be amazed at the number of individual works which stand forth as masterworks. The cumulative greatness of American art is here revealed, not as a grand national style, but as the emergence of a series of brilliant individuals. The exigencies of the pioneer life, and the lack of a cultural tradition, made early contact with European influences inevitable. In fact, it was the contact of those pioneer artists with European culture which mitigated the deep provincialism of our early national life. Even today we suffer more from lack rather than surfeit of cultural rapport with the older countries; and we still have much to learn from our own artists who bring us the breadth of their cosmopolitanism. Modern tendencies in art are less and less national in the narrow sense, and the separate cults and schools have their devotees in various countries quite regardless of geographical boundaries.

Yet the pictures hung in this exhibition are saturated with qualities that are essentially American. You get a sense of some tremendous vitality pervading these canvasses, of an emotional energy that has scarcely been tapped. You feel that these men have deep sources to draw from, and that especially the young moderns are very near to their sources. The new spirit, the new knowledge, the new liberation in the arts, have put a power into the hands of our artists to express the truth and beauty of America as it has never been told before.

If you are one who harbors a faith in the high spirit of America, you will acknowledge a loyalty and gratitude toward these men and women who are saying such fine things for their country. It will come to you poignantly that these are ours, and that you want to give them your encouragement and support.

EGMONT ARENS.

In a spirit of hearty co-operation with and a keen appreciation of the aims and the ideals of the Junior Art League, The Sunwise Turn, Inc., wishes to call attention to the inter-relation of all forms of art and especially to emphasize the close connection between printed word and painted symbol.

For language is the coin current of our realm and it is through its medium as guide and interpreter that most of us come to a true realization of the more intangible forms of expression. There is a common tendency to see first with the ear but by listening aright to the teachings of the great voices of the past and of the present the scales will soon drop from our eyes and our vision be made direct and discerning. For this purpose familiarity with the following books will be of indispensable service.

The CENTURY Magazine and the Renaissance of American Illustration

UNDER the guidance of Richard Watson Gilder and Alexander W. Drake the Century Magazine, during the early years of illustrative art in America, established itself as the recognized leader and created a tradition which has long been dear to all lovers of the graphic arts. Such men as Abbey and Pennell were Century contributors, and a proper estimate was given to black and white drawings. In those days the halftone had not opened an easy door to haste and slackness, and illustration was really an art. Believing that so precious a heritage cannot be neglected, the Century Magazine is now again to raise its banner of graphic leadership with the assured and ready cooperation of public and artists alike. You will find in the Century—in addition to distinguished fiction and stimulating articles on world affairs—illustrations and decorations of a high quality, beautifully reproduced in black and white.

TEMPERA COLORS

It is not a question of how long you have been making color nor how extensively you advertise it, for a color is only as good as the materials used in making it. The success of our tempera colors is due to the confidence the American artist has that we do not sell adulterated colors nor substitutes.
